From the cliffs of Oia, overlooking Santorini Island we experience an absolutely picturesque sunset. The clouds were painted bright yellow and orange, seeming brushed with hues of purple and pink, all cascading across the Aegean Sea. Just as the sun set, our meal was served- a flavorful Frittata abundant with local veggies and sprinkled with herbed Feta cheese.

Ps...For dessert, a modernly rustic Olive Oil Citrus Cake...its glaze shimmered reminiscent of the evening's scenes.

Arriving early-morning to the ruins of Oxtankah in Chetumal, Mexico, we explored the ancient architecture. By the foot of a massive tree we rested and enjoyed some local recipes, our favorite was chilaquiles - a salsa of tomatillos and melty cheeses mixed with tortilla strips. You could taste the tradition, running as deep as the roots of those towering trees.

Perfectly poached eggs simmered in a delicious sauce - unapologetic as we used bread soaking up every last drop.
